SENSATIONAL TESTIMONY GIVEN IN ELLER-RINEHART CASE

The hearing last night of William Eller charged with disorderly conduct swearing and using vile language on the streets, brought out a large crowd. It was known that Eller had entered a plea of not guilty and intended to attribute the trouble to a personal feeling on the part of the arresting officer, Paul Rinehart.

The hearing was set for 7:45 but was not called until 8 o'clock. Eller was arraigned and the charge read to him, and his plea of not guilty was entered. Mr. Rinehart, the arresting officer, was called, sworn and questioned as to the trouble. He said he was coming out of the Sheetz hotel office to the street Monday evening when Eller came along. He greeted Rinehart with the interrogation that he (Rinehart) had been knocking him about town and wanted to know the whys. The officer claimed that he told Eller to move on and not start any trouble, that he hadn't said anything about Eller. The latter then commenced to call Rinehart vile names, according to the witness, defying him to place Eller under arrest and adding that if the officer did not have his mace and gun he would clean up on him. Rinehart said he decently and quietly led Eller down as far as Eleventh street and asked him to go home and not make any further trouble. Eller, he said, refused to go, and still threatened him, claiming he couldn't arrest him. Rinehart then ordered the patrol and Eller was taken to the police station.

As witnesses to prove that he tried to get Eller to go home without trouble, and that he made the arrest in a gentlemanly way, Mr. Rinehart summoned T. T. Spence, who was an eye witness to the trouble. Mr. Spence said he saw the officer try to get the man to go home, but that he refused and called him vile names, and that he summoned the patrol after he tried to avoid making the arrest. He said the officer was peaceable and did not strike or kick Eller.

J. N. Husher, another witness corroborated the above testimony. He said he heard Eller call the officer vile names, and the officer try to get Eller to go home peaceably. He did not see him strike or kick the prisoner and he saw the whole occurrence.

M. F. McClarey and John Robinson were eye witnesses to the trouble and they testified to the gentlemanly actions of the officer in making the arrest. They heard Eller use bad language and claim if the officer was stripped of his mace and gun that he (Eller) would clean up on him.

Mr. Eller was then sworn. He said the officer asked him what he was knocking him about. He said Rinehart spoke the first words angrily and that it was an old sore. He was told by the burgess to confine the testimony to the actual occurrences of the trouble and not to deal with old sores. Eller said the officer kicked him fif-

His Legs Tangled on Account of Booze

Charles McElfresh of Lock 4 was the first prisoner to have a hearing this morning before Burgess Dunlap. He was charged with being drunk and disorderly. He plead guilty to the charge and was discharged with the instructions to get out of town.

Mike Adams was the next one. Mike met a friend yesterday and he treated him several times. Mike's feet got tangled and he could not walk. When arrested he fought the officers in an attempt to get away. This morning at the hearing he was discharged but was told he would not get off so easy the next time.

The latest reports are, it is a pleasure to learn, that the "Kreutzer Sonata" featuring Nancy O'Neil and Theda Bara is the best production of the William Fox productions. Miss Theda Bara was the leading actress in "A Fool There Was" and we learn from reliable sources that "Krentzer Sonata" is better than "A Fool There Was." We guarantee it to be a fact. We also wish to call your attention to the next great attraction, Theda Bara acting in "The Demansu Case." 1t

Matthews Heirs Awarded Very Liberal Damages

The viewers appointed by the court to award damages to the Mathews heirs for land taken by the railroad company for improvements awarded $3,400 for the lot at the corner of Third and Donner and $2,540 for the ground below town.

The representative of the railroad company took the initiative to sprag any possibility of an appeal from the decision of the viewers in giving them more than reasonable liberty. The viewers were given to understand that after a decision as to the actual value was reached that a sum sufficient to remove any doubt or dispute should be added. The viewers thought this was more than a fair proposition and it is likely that the above amount will be satisfactory to the owners of the property.

Hunter Damage Suit Still Being Tried

The case of W. D. Hunter against the borough is still on in Greensburg. It is a cross suit the borough has brought against the doctor to recover the amount due for street paving, and the doctor claims damage for change of grade and destruction of trees to the amount of $3,000. It will last all day likely and may not conclude with the closing of court this evening. Many witnesses returned to Greensburg this morning to testify for both sides.

Mr. Hunter stated that his property was damaged by his shade trees being lowered, the result of which caused them to die. Along Sixth street his lot was cut forty inches and at the corner of Reed and Sixth the sidewalk was lowered 18 inches. He claimed that his property was damaged instead of being improved.

BUNGARD WINS VICTORY IN LEGISLATIVE HALLS

Rev. B. F. Bungard showed his fighting tenacity on the floor of the lower house yesterday when he attacked the sincerity of the interests that were attempting to force a measure through. Mr. Bungard jumped to the floor and made a convincing speech. The bill was House bill No. 393 relating to duties, powers and fees of coroners. The bill was up with an attempt to slip it through the House. Rev. Bungard renewed his fight on the bill and made a speech showing it to be an iniquitous measure inasmuch as the fees and powers of coroners were unreasonable. The vote before announced showed it to be close for those attempting to push it through. Several changed their vote from "no" to "aye" but the vote showed 13 short of passage. Rev. Bungard was heartily congratulated over his winning fight. The bill failed previously, April 6, but was sent back to committee and reported yesterday morning.

MISSISSSIPPI BARRISTERS HELD MEETING YESTERDAY

Jackson, Miss., May 5—A plea for the establishment in Mississippi of a modern unified court was the subject of a stirring address delivered yesterday by Chief Justice Sydney Smith of the state supreme court, to the members of the state bar association at its annual meeting. The address of welcome was delivered by Joseph Hirsch of Vicksburg. At today's session Thomas W. Shelton of Virginia will speak on the conflict between moral and jural laws, nad former justice Cooper will talk on recollections of eminent Mississippians. The meeting will end tomorrow.

ALLEGORICAL WEDDING OF RIVERS IN PAGEANT

Kennewick, Wash., May 5—The twin cities, Kenewick and Pasco, yesterday celebrated the opening of the Celilo canal. On arival of the flotilla from Lewistown a parade passed through Pasco and across the river to Kennewick. Here a big barbecue was served the guests and a pageant depicted the allegorical wedding of the Columbia and Snake rivers by means of the new canal. A big gathering of the people from the countryside was on hand for the festivities.

CHILD WELFARE CIRCLE HELD INTERESTING MEETING

The Monessen Child Welfare Circle of the National Congress of Mothers held one of their very best and most encouraging meetings on Monday afternoon in Kelly's hall. Nine new members were admitted and more are to be voted on at the next meeting.

The members are very enthusiastic, and this organization bids fair to be one of benefit to the young people of the community. The work of the organization is the improvement of the conditions concerning the children in the home, the school and also the community at large. Kindergarten work, improvement of public grounds vacant lots, school gardens and other lines of work have been taken up very successfully in other places

The papers read at Monday's meeting were full of suggestions as to the needs of young children for an outlet for their various activities. The article by Mrs. L. W. Shepler on the subject, "The Educative Value of Work" was full of suggestions as to the many ways in which the activity of growing children may be directed along the most beneficial lines.

Mrs. G. H. Thomas gave a very comprehensive discussion of the subject "The Economic Worth of Child Study." This article showed a great deal of careful preparation and also familiarity with the subject. Mrs. Thomas having made child study a specialty, was very competent to discuss the needs of the child at various stages of his development. This paper was much appreciated by all members present.

These meetings are held the first and third Mondays of the month. Anyone interested in the work can obtain particulars regarding membership from any of the members.

Telegram Conveyed News of Sudden Death

Mrs. G. C. Diehl received a telegram this morning announcing the sudden and unexpected death of her mother, Mrs. Joseph W. Boor at Altoona, Pa., where she had been making her home with a daughter. The deceased was 82 years of age and had always enjoyed the best of health. Word of her illness had not preceeded the death notice

She leaves a husband and eight living children, two of whom live in Monessen. They are Mrs. G. C. Diehl and James Boor. The funeral will take place Friday. Interment will be made at Bedford, the former home of the family. Mr. and Mrs. Diehl will leave in the morning for Altoona and will be absent until after the funeral.

No Patience With Loafers

When the president of a large corporation, George J. Whalen, of the United Cigar Stores Co., of America, retired recently at the age of 50, saying that he thought he had acquired enough money so that he could spend the rest of his days as he pleased, there was much newspaper discussion, and one editor said that it was almost a certainty that the millionaire who retired would return to business for the reason that there is no leisure class in America worthy of the company of a man who amounts to anything. This editor asserted that the American business man has no patience with the person who loafs.

The questions which Mr. Whalen asked a newspaper man who was interviewing him about retiring from business, clearly show that it is not necessary to be a loafer if a man retires from business when he is in sound mental and physical condition. "Why should not President Wilson have a council of successful business men, whose expert advice he may take at any time?" inquired Mr. Whalen, who added, "Why hasn't a man like Mr. Frick for instance, as much interest in legislation as any congressman?"

The answer, of course, is that any public man, from President to city councilman, ought to be glad to have the advice and assistance of business men, and most of them would be glad to have it, but too many business men are so busy with their own affairs that they do not take time to study public questions and fit themselves to be advisers of public men. More and more the men in active business life are taking interest in public questions and there is a very urgent demand for men of the ability and courage of Mr. Whalen. He has indeed a splendid opportunity to render public service and the fact that he has asked the questions above quoted gives reason for hoping that he will avail himself of the opportunity which is before him.

More Corn Bread

The war in Europe is likely to teach the Europeans the value of corn meal as human food. The demand for it has already boosted the price of corn in the American markets, and it is likely to boost it still higher. This is unfortunate for the domestic consumers of corn bread and boiled mush, but there will be compensations. After the war is over the Europeans who have eaten corn will continue to eat it, and the fields of waving corn on the American farms will be transformed into gold mines. The yellow kernels will glint with the real luster of wealth. But even though corn meal is dearer than it was a few weeks ago, it is still cheaper than wheat flour. Necessity may teach some Americans that they can reduce the cost of living, even now, by using more corn meal. And that will be another form in which the compensation will manifest itself.

Old Worrier Lives

The oldest horse that served the country in the War of the Rebellion is still alive, at the age of 53 years, at Horseheads, N. Y. It is owned by P. A. McIntosh who is also a veteran of the same war. To prove his assertion Mr. McIntosh shows the government brand on the animal's hip, which reads "I. C., 1864." Horse and man served in the same regiment. Although bent with age, his hair turning gray and his teeth becoming worn, the old warhorse is still able to eat 12 quarts of oats and take his master to town several times a week. It is estimated that the animal is at least 53 years old. Farmers say the average life of a horse is about 15 years.

STATE PRESIDENT WILL DROP CHILDHOOD GIFT INTO SUFFRAGE MELTING POT

Harrisburg, Pa., May 5—When the state suffragists install their big "melting pot" at headquarters here next Saturday, one of the first trinkets to be dropped in it will be a tiny gold ring set with emeralds. The ring is one of the most treasured possessions of Mrs. Frank M. Roessing, president of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage association, and will be her personal contribution to the "melting pot" the contents of which are to be converted into cash later for the suffrage campaign fund.

Presented to her by her father on her tenth birthday, the ring holds childhood associations that are especially dear to the state president. Because of her personal interest in children, however, and her firm belief that the chief benefits of women suffrage will accrue to the children of the state, Mrs. Roesing selected this little ring as the most appropriate personal offering she could make.

"I am just superstitious enough to believe that it will bring us luck," she said with a smile. "It has been a sort of talisman to me ever since the day my father gave it to me. I want it to bring too fortune too, to the children of Pennsylvania, especially to the little ones who are at work in factory or mill. I want woman suffrage to be voted in November so that we women of the state will have more power to help give these children back their birthright—the right to play and develop into more healthy citizens."

Practically every loyal suffragist in the state will make some contribution to the "melting pot" and when its contents are converted into cash next September, it is expected that the campaign fund of the suffragists will be swelled materially.

The Record in Monessen is a Unique One

If the reader has a "bad back" or any kidney ills and is looking for an effective kidney medicine, better depend on the remedy endorsed by people you know. Doan's Kidney Pills have given great satisfaction in such cases. Monesen citizens can testify to this. Here is a case of it:

H. R. Wilbur, 131 McKee avenue, Monessen, says: "I contracted a heavy cold which affected my kidneys. My back was sore and lame all the time and I had to have help to turn in bed. My whole body was like a board. I often had to have someone dress me. Shooting pains darted through my body and I couldn't do my work. My body became bloated. The secretions were profuse in passage and contained sediment. I had dizzy spells and hot flashes and I was miserable in every way. I doctored for years but didn't improve. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me and two boxes practically cured me. Now and then I take Doan's Kidney Pills as a kidney tonic, and give them credit for keeping me well."

THIS WOMAN'S SICKNESS

Quickly Yielded To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bridgeton, N.J.—"I want to thank you a thousand times for the wonderful good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered very much from a female trouble. I had bearing down pains, was irregular and at times could hardly walk across the room. I was unable to do my housework or attend to my baby I was so weak. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me a world of good, and now I am strong and healthy, can do my work and tend my baby. I advise all suffering women to take it and get well as I did."—Mrs. FANNIE COOPER, R.F.D., Bridgeton, N.J.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

When Billy Sunday Came to Town

By ALEXANDER CORKEY

Copyright, 1913, by the H. K. Fly Co.

SYNOPSIS.

Reginald Nelson, a young Englishman of high birth, comes to this country to win fame and fortune. On the steamer he meets Albert Townley, a minister, Mrs. Graham and her pretty daughter, Joy.

Reginald goes to Bronson, home of his three new acquaintances, where he learns that Joy's father is a leading lawyer, who is the mainstay of a corrupt political ring. He gets a job.

The young Englishman enters the social life of Bronson. He falls in love with Joy, and later discovers that she is engaged to be married to Roland Gregory.

Allan Rutledge, another minister, and the Rev. Mr. Townley confer on the evil moral and laboring conditions in Bronson. The reform element meets and decides to have Billy Sunday, the noted evangelist, aid in a "cleanup."

Editor Marchmount offers Reginald a position on his paper. The latter accepts, and later he performs a heroic act in stopping a dangerous runaway.

Nelson starts on his work on the Courier. He begins to investigate the suspicious death of Mae Mobray, a youthful worker in Roland Gregory's factory plant. The councilmen and saloon keepers oppose the coming of Billy Sunday.

A tabernacle is built for Billy Sunday, and Reginald, in the columns of the Courier, begins a spirited campaign in favor of the evangelist. Sunday holds his first meeting in Bronson.

Much to the anger of Mr. Graham and Bud McCrea, a councilman, Sunday's work proves effective as an attack on vice. "By the help of God we'll clean up Bronson," says Sunday.

On a Sunday afternoon the reformer makes a powerful attack on gambling and saloons and hypocrisy. He describes saloons as "breeders of lawlessness."

Joy finds it impossible to prevail on Roland Gregory, her fiance, to join the church. Mr. Rutledge gets hold of the "fatal ring" that poor little Mae Mobray wore at the time of her mysterious death.

Reginald and the two ministers, Allan Rutledge and Albert Townley, resolve to make a tour of the vicious resorts in Bronson and expose the whole disgrace.

A detective takes Reginald and his associates through the slums. They see gambling and all night drunkenness. The politicians are enraged at this action.

Lawyer Graham conspires with McCrea, Roland Gregory and others to ruin Reginald and drive him out of the city. They plan to first get him off the staff of the Courier.

CHAPTER XVI.

Swift Punishment.

IT was after 5 o'clock before Reginald Nelson arrived at the Courier office on the evening of the eventful July 4. He was surprised to see his own private office open when he entered and to hear some one manipulating his typewriter. He passed quickly inside and was amazed to see Ned Rowlands working diligently at the writing machine.

"What's the matter, Ned?" he exclaimed. "Is your own typewriter broken?"

"Have you not heard the news?" asked the other in response.

"What news?"

"The directors had a meeting this morning and gave me the position of editor of the Courier. I am sorry for you, Nelson, but that edition of yours today was a bad break, and I am afraid it has ruined your life."

"Ruined my life?" said Reginald Nelson in a dazed way. Then he aroused himself. "Get out of here, Rowlands," he ordered. "I am the editor of the Courier." The Englishman's eyes were shining as he spoke.

"Sorry, old man," said the other familiarly, "but you'll have to take your medicine. Here is my introductory editorial," and Ned Rowlands handed Reginald a sheet of typewriting. The Englishman glanced at the headline and saw that the article was entitled, "Greetings From the Courier's New Editor." He tore the sheet of paper into fragments and threw them on the floor.

"Get out of here!" he thundered to his former city reporter.

Ned Rowlands laughed sarcastically in his face and sneered: "You forgot, Nelson, that you were not working for the public, but that you were working for the Courier Publishing company. They have no more use for you."

"And I have no more use for you!" exclaimed Reginald, seizing the other by the coat collar. "I have wanted to discharge you for a month, and I do it now. Your place is vacant."

As he was speaking these words Reginald marched Ned Rowlands to the door of his private office and pushed him into the outer room. The ousted city reporter made no resistance, being alarmed at the excitement of the other, and he was hastening away when he ran square into a gentleman who was approaching the editorial sanctum.

"Excuse me, sir," said Rowlands, glancing up and seeing the face of Mr. Graham, white with anger.

"Come back with me, you coward," said the lawyer in a low tone. After the expulsion of his city reporter Reginald had slammed the door and had just seated himself at his desk to collect his thoughts when he heard the voice of Mr. Graham saying: "You are discharged as editor of the Courier, Mr. Nelson. We have no further use for your services, and you will oblige us by leaving the office at once. We have appointed Ned Rowlands in your place."

Reginald Nelson turned and glared at the intruders.

"Come, come," said the lawyer sharply. "Get out of here."

"Who has discharged me?" asked Reginald, restraining himself with difficulty.

"The directors of the Courier Publishing company."

"Who are these directors?" asked Reginald. "I am a part owner of this paper, and I claim to have some voice in the management." Reginald Nelson had paid no attention to the business management of the newspaper, leaving that entirely to Mr. Graham.

"I control a majority of the stock of this concern," said Mr. Graham loftily, "and I have decided that such a person as you is not fit to be editor of the Courier. You will oblige me by leaving this office at once or I shall be forced to have you expelled by the officers of the law."

Reginald Nelson slowly began to see his hopeless position. He had looked on himself as part owner and manager of his paper. He believed that his course as an editor would be judged successful if he could keep his subscription lists growing, as a newspaper is saved or damned by this standard in the commercial world. Reginald felt that his declining number of readers was due to the incompetency of his city reporter, and the consequent loss of confidence in the Courier by large numbers of the working people. He had been assured by the events of the day that his bold attack on the city administration and his exposure of the evils which were tolerated by the Bronson officials had re-established the credit of the paper as a genuine friend of reform. He had an extra large edition of that day's paper printed, but after Allan Rutledge's speech at Bronson park the demand for the Courier was so great that the edition was soon exhausted and the young editor had been congratulated on every hand.

"I thought the Courier had deserted us," an enthusiastic advocate of reform had declared to him during the afternoon, "but your issue of today will make the Courier the most popular paper in all Michigan."

Encouraged by the marks of popular approval on every hand, and deeming that his position as editor had been assured by his Independence day edition, Reginald Nelson had returned to the Courier office in high spirits. His interview with Ned Rowlands and the words of Mr. Graham had almost unmanned him. He could not as yet quite understand the situation.

"I will admit the circulation of the paper dropped a thousand or so in the past few weeks," said Reginald in a perplexed tone, "but that was the result of a lack of confidence in us as genuine friends of reform. The edition of today has convinced the most skeptical that the Courier will represent the people, and I look for an immediate rise in the number of papers printed. I was going to order 1,000 extra copies struck off for tomorrow."

Mr. Graham listened impatiently until Reginald had ceased and responded quickly, "We don't want you as our editor a day longer if the circulation increased at once 10,000 a day."

In a moment the whole situation became plain to Reginald. The Courier had been purchased by the enemies of reform. His position as editor had been given him in order to blind the people to the fact that henceforth the Courier was to be in the hands of these enemies.

Reginald Nelson felt his strength returning. He met the look of the lawyer fearlessly.

"Let me show you something," then went on Mr. Graham sneeringly. He led the way out of the office into the printing room. Two or three men were already at work, and one of them was fixing one of the forms of the paper for the next day.

"Give Mr. Nelson a proof of that article which I wrote," ordered Mr. Graham.

The workman hastened to obey, the lawyer being recognized as the owner of the plant. In a few minutes a dampened "proof" was placed in Reginald's hands. "Read that," said the lawyer snappingly.

In astonishment the editor began to read a bitter attack on the veracity of his Independence day exposure.

"The owners of the Courier regret exceedingly," the article declared "that Independence day in Bronson was marred with the publication of some vile slanders against the honor of our fair city. The youthful editor to whom we intrusted the paper has betrayed his trust, but he has been summarily removed from his place as editor and his past life is now being investigated, as there are some rumors of former breaches of trust before he came to Bronson. He owes the Courier Publishing company a large sum of money and action will be brought against him at once in our courts. The public is warned against him as a dangerous adventurer."

When Reginald Nelson had read these words he stopped and looked up at the lawyer with blazing eyes. "Are you going to publish these calumnies in the Courier?" he demanded fiercely.

"Yes, and a good deal more, sir. We'll drive you out of Bronson in a week." Mr. Graham was grinding his teeth in a rage.

Reginald Nelson looked at him for a moment astounded, and then his own anger overwhelmed him. He seized the "form" in which the offensive article against himself was and swept it to the floor, scattering the type in every direction. "If you were a younger man," he shouted to Mr. Graham, "I would sweep this floor with you. Infamous rascal!"

Two burly policemen appeared at once on the scene, and the lawyer cried: "Take the madman out! Take him to jail for destruction of property! I will file a complaint!"

The two policemen dashed at Reginald, one seizing each arm. The powerful Englishman struggled with his captors. With terrific force he threw one of them against the wall and turned to attack the other, but the officer drew his baton and as Reginald reached for him he struck him a crashing blow on the head. The young man fell senseless on the floor.

"Take him to jail, take him to jail!" shouted Mr. Graham. The two policemen stood silent, gazing at the prostrate form of their antagonist. "He has the strength of an ox," said the one whom Reginald had flung against the wall, rubbing his houlder. "It is a good thing you hit him with the billy or he would have downed us both."

The policeman telephoned for the police ambulance, and in a little while Reginald was lying on a cot in the Bronson jail.

It was an hour before the injured ex-editor revived. He opened his eyes and gazed around him.

"Where am I?" he asked in amazement.

"In jail," said an attendant shortly as he advanced to the cot. He was under the impression that Reginald was in a drunken stupor, as he did not know who the prisoner was nor why he had been brought to the city bastile.

"Jail!" exclaimed Reginald. His memory began to return. He remembered his fight with the policemen in the printing room of the Courier.

"Telephone to the Rev. Allan Rutledge to come to me at once," he requested.

In less than fifteen minutes Allan Rutledge was sitting on the edge of the cot speaking soothingly to the injured man.

"My God, what an outrage! And to think that this has been done in Bronson on Independence day!" exclaimed Allan Rutledge when Reginald had told him his story.

Allan Rutledge at once went to the office of the jail and arranged that Reginald should be immediately removed to the Cameron home. "I will be responsible for him," said the minister.

When Reginald Nelson staggered into the Cameron home, assisted by Allan Rutledge, the good Scotchman and his wife were greatly frightened.

"What's wrong with our boy?" asked Mr. Cameron anxiously.

"Not very much," replied Allan. "He will soon be all right. Let us take him upstairs to bed at once."

All that night the minister remained by the bedside of the ex-editor.

A doctor was called, and he examined the wound on his head and shook his head gravely. Reginald Nelson gradually sunk into a stupor, and in the morning his condition was very serious.

The next day the issue of the Courier astounded the people of Bronson.

Mr. Graham had a signed article in the paper denouncing Reginald Nelson and giving his version of the fight in the printing room. He characterized the Independence day edition as a mass of libel and promised the people that the owners of the paper would be more careful in their supervision of the newspaper. "The Courier has always borne the reputation of being a conservative and safe paper, and we regret very much that this adventurer, who wormed himself into the confidence of so many of our citizens, has brought such a disgrace upon us." These were the closing words of Mr. Graham's statement. The citizens were at once divided into two camps, some asserting that they always knew that Reginald Nelson was an impostor, and the others, at first greatly in the majority, protested that the ex-editor had been misjudged.

In the issue of the day following notice was given of the suit against Reginald by the Courier Publishing company, and dark hints were made here and there in the paper in regard to stories which had become current regarding the immigrant's career in England.

It was even reported that he had deserted a wife in the old country, that he was a fugitive from justice and that he was an ex-criminal.

These stories were also circulated on the streets of Bronson, and the popular sentiment began to turn against the unfortunate Reginald.

LESS HYSTERIA THIS SESSION

Members Say They Are Not Like 1913 Legislators.

WANT PRESENT ACTS REPEALED

According to Speeches of Senators and Representatives Many of the Laws Passed Two Years Ago Were Directed Against Business Men Without Just Cause—Non-Partisan Judge Repealer.

Harrisburg, May 4.—If the speeches of senators and representatives on various bills up for debate this session reflect the sentiment of their constituency the people of Pennsylvania have anything but a high opinion of the 1913 legislative performance. They think that that legislature mixed things up in "beautiful" shape.

Repealer after repealer has been presented, and the end is not yet in sight. When a bill designed to wipe off the books a 1913 law comes up for consideration invariably a member mentions the "hysteria" that prevailed in that session and the disposition on the part of the members to destroy anything and everything in which money was interested. Even political bills put through two years ago are being vigorously attacked with a view of supplanting them with the old laws. For instance, last week the senate, by a vote of 27 to 14, passed the Tompkins bill to repeal the judges' non-partisan election law.

When the cold storage law repealer was under consideration in the house mention was made of its vicious provisions against honest business men, and one of the speakers asked what else could be expected from the 1913 body when a majority of it evidently thought that every business man should be fined or imprisoned on general principles.

The judiciary general committee of the house has reported the constitutional convention bill with a favorable recommendation to the house. The bill was introduced on Jan. 25 by Representative Roney, was marked No. 1 of the house bills and has been the subject of much discussion during the last few months.

The bill as amended in committee provides that there shall be three delegates to the convention appointed from each senatorial district and fifteen by the governor. In all this would make 165 members. The salary of each delegates is placed at $750, and the entire expense of the convention is not to exceed $500,000.

During the arguments before the committee a few weeks ago former Mayor Magee, of Pittsburgh, and William Draper Lewis, for a time Progressive candidate for the governorship against Governor Brumbaugh, were the principal speakers in its behalf.

Expense of Primaries.

The bill providing that counties shall pay the expenses of primary elections, which was defeated in the senate, was reconsidered last week and passed finally, 34 to 5. Senator Sproul, of Delaware, made a brief speech, in which he said the bill would save the state $800,000, which could be devoted to good roads.

The measure forbidding building and loan associations to lend more than $6000 on one building unless the mortgage is a first lien, or to join in loaning more than $25,000 on one building unless the mortgage is a first lien also went through.

Privately Owned Jitneys.

The house passed a bill which, if it goes through the senate and meets with the approval of Governor Brumbaugh, may lead to opposition to the privately owned jitney busses now operating in many parts of Pennsylvania.

It was introduced by Samuel A. Whitaker, of Phoenixville, and empowers corporations to operate, lease or control lines of self-propelling omnibusses or other motor vehicles.

It was rumored in Harrisburg that the bill meets with the approval of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company, but an official said that the company is not interested in it in any way. That statement was construed to mean that the company does not contemplate operating jitneys.

Mr. Whitaker said he introduced the bill to give people living in the country a chance to connect from one trolley line to another by motor car. He said he did not consult the transit company or any other company or person in framing the bill.

The Jones bill, which required that each jitney driver should be heavily bonded to cover suits for damages, was dropped from the house of representatives' calendar.

The senate reported out favorably from the elections committee the bill allowing the friends and opponents of woman suffrage to have watchers at the polls next November. These watchers may be men or women, just as they are selected by their respective suffrage or anti suffrage organizations to keep tabs on the voting when the suffrage amendment will be up for adoption or rejection.

teen times from the Sheetz hotel to Eleventh street and that black and blue marks were on his body as proof. He admitted he told Rinehart that he would scrap if he hadn't his mace and gun, and that he did call him vile names after he had been kicked. Asked if he had any witnesses, Mr. Eller replied that he had not. Milton Eller, a brother, then wanted to testify. Burgess Dunlap asked if he had seen the trouble and he replied that he had not, but that he wanted to tell of the ill feeling the officer bore toward his brother. The burgess replied that if he wished to file charges against the officer for misconduct that he would be given the opportunity at the conclusion of the case, but that if he hadn't seen the trouble of Monday night, his statements couldn't be admitted as evidence.

The case was then concluded and Burgess Dunlap declared William Eller guilty of the charges and fined him $5.00 and costs, amounting in all to $9.00, which he paid.

Milton Eller, the brother, then took the oath and made the statement that Rinehart was a gambler and a rounder, that he brought a man by the name of Douglas here from Pittsburgh, arranged a gambling game in which Douglass took part along with his brother William, that Rinehart as an officer protected the game for $3.00 and that the men at the table paid the $3.00, that Rinehart got sore at William Eller because he was not given a share in the spoils, that Rinehart about five weeks ago accosted William Eller on the street, upbraided him, swore at him while in uniform and in the presence of ladies and pedestrians, that said occurrence was at Fifth and Donner avenue. That the gambling game was in the Chester building (name of the home withheld.) He swore that he had a witness, Richard Conroy who would testify that Rinehart stood at the Sheetz hotel bar, drank whiskey and played card tricks and that he was addicted to the drink habit. Other things Eller claimed he could prove against Rinehart by competent witnesses.

Burgess Dunlap will give the officer a hearing and permit Eller to prove his charges. If he proves them, Rinehart will likely lose his position and if he fails, suit will likely be entered by the officer for libel. No date has yet been set for the hearing of the officer.

—The spirit level and sliding rule have been combined in a new tool.
